Saapwaa's Narak Vlogs

The Complete Guide to Exploring Narak with Comedy — Production Batch 1

This volume is the first numbered batch of a planned 300-page production handbook. It contains the master plan for the whole book, the research and source plan, the definitive character bible, the world and continuity guide, the full episode list, and the first complete production batch of scenes (Episodes 1–3).

Contents of this batch

How to read this book

The book does three jobs at once. It is a research guide to what traditional sources say about Yama's realm, a series bible for an original comedy vlog, and a prompt library for AI image and video tools. Keeping those three jobs apart is the most important rule in the book, so every claim carries one of three labels:

Label	Meaning	Example
SOURCE-BASED	A claim supported by a cited traditional source or its translation. A citation sits beside it.	The Vaitarani is described as a hundred yojanas wide (Vedic People, Preta Khaṇḍa ch. 47, v. 3).
INTERPRETATION	A reasonable reading of a source passage, offered as a reading and not as the text itself.	Saumya, the first city on the path, works well as a "gentle" location because the text says souls there feel some relief.

Label	Meaning	Example
FICTIONAL COMEDY	Invented for Saapwaa's vlog: places, people, shops, rules, conversations and incidents.	Kulhad Didi's tea stall and its tea that is never cold.
UNVERIFIED	A detail that could not be verified in this batch. It is kept out of the factual guide until checked.	Chapter numbering on sacred-texts.com (the site refused access during research).

The promise to readers and viewers. No toilet, kitchen, food stall, queue, tea, workshop, office window or local rule in this book is claimed to come from the Garuda Purana. Those are Saapwaa's fictional neighbourhood. When the series visits a place that the texts do describe, the scene says so and cites it.

Tone and respect

The comedy comes from Saapwaa: a modern, slightly vain, curious vlogger living in an invented residential corner of Narak and reacting to its everyday inconveniences. It does not come from mocking Yama, Chitragupta, deities, priests, rituals, devotees or the moral teaching of the texts. Scenes never show torment for laughs, and the punishments described in the sources are summarised soberly in the research guide and never staged as gags.

A note on AI tools

Every scene has a standalone image prompt and a standalone video prompt under 900 characters. The prompts are written to reduce common failure causes (crowds, chained actions, written text, changing locations), but no prompt can guarantee a clean result. Output depends on the generator, its model version and its settings. Part XI of the finished book covers troubleshooting; the short version is: simplify, split the shot, or generate silently and add the voice in the edit.

1 · The Proposed 300-Page Book

Master table of contents and production plan. Page ranges are targets for the final layout; they will be re-measured after assembly.

Master table of contents

Part	Chapter and contents	Pages	Planned range
I	Cover, title, contents and introduction — cover; title page; full contents; how to read the labels; tone and respect; a note on AI tools	10	1–10
II	Narak in the traditional sources — the Garuda Purana and its Preta Khaṇḍa; the path of Yama and its sixteen cities; the Vaitarani; Yama's city, its four gates and its court; Chitragupta and the record-keepers; the named narakas; translation differences; what the texts do not describe	30	11–40
III	Character bible and world continuity — Saapwaa's locked design; personality and voice; props; recurring residents and their locks; the Dhuan Tola map; timeline; running-joke ledger	15	41–55
IV	Narak's fictional residential life — Dhuan Tola and its neighbours; Cave No. 13; customs of borrowing, sharing lamp oil and visiting; rules everyone follows but nobody wrote	25	56–80
V	Food, kitchen, lighting, rooms and routines — the three-stone stove; the always-warm water pot; oil lamps and wall torches; the hot stone bed; bathing corner; the primitive toilet (tastefully); a resident's day hour by hour	25	81–105
VI	Streets, markets, residents and public places — Garam Adda tea stall; Lalten Lal's workshop; the Haat; the Signal Rock; the Rest Bench; Bridge No. 3; Window No. 7; the water point; how to stage short interviews	30	106–135
VII	Mythological locations adapted for respectful vlogging — Saumya and the Pushpabhadra; Vaitarani viewed from a distance; Shitadhya, the cold city; the southern approach; Yama's city as the sources describe it; what is never staged	30	136–165
VIII	Comedy writing, roasting, hooks and storytelling — the five-beat framework; hooks that work in silence; roasting systems, not people; callbacks; Hindi vlog voice; a library of banned clichés	20	166–185
IX	Episode planning and continuity — the 25-episode list; time tracking; scene register; prop and costume continuity; how a recurring character returns with purpose	15	186–200
X	Complete scene-by-scene production library — Episodes 1–25, about 120 ten-second scenes, each with image prompt, video prompt, dialogue, visual comedy, link and source status	80	201–280
XI	Production workflow, troubleshooting and references — generation workflow; consistency tricks; failure modes and fixes; editing and voice-over; bibliography; source log; index	20	281–300
	Total	300

Detailed chapter plan

Part II — Narak in the traditional sources (30 pp.)

1. What the Garuda Purana is, and why the Preta Khaṇḍa matters here (2 pp.)
2. The sources used, their editions and how to cite them (3 pp.)
3. The road to Yama: distance, conditions and the sixteen cities (6 pp.)
4. The Vaitarani: description, name, crossing and the gift of a cow (5 pp.)
5. Yama's city: four gates, the court, Chitragupta and the Śravaṇas (5 pp.)
6. The named narakas, described briefly and soberly (3 pp.)
7. Where translations disagree (numbers, names, chapter order) (3 pp.)
8. What the sources do not describe — and why that is where the comedy lives (3 pp.)

Part III — Character bible and world continuity (15 pp.)

Saapwaa's locked design and turnaround notes (3) · voice and vocabulary (2) · props (1) · six recurring characters with locks (4) · Dhuan Tola map and locations (2) · timeline and running-joke ledger (3).

Parts IV–VII — The world (110 pp.)

Each location chapter follows the same pattern: what the place is, its label (SOURCE-BASED , INTERPRETATION or FICTIONAL COMEDY), its look (a reusable environment lock for prompts), who lives or works there, what is funny about it, what is off-limits, and two or three ready scenes that can be dropped into any episode.

Part VIII — Comedy (20 pp.)

The engagement framework (hook → curiosity → interaction → payoff → continuation), with worked examples from the library; ten comedy engines used in the series and the episodes that use them; roasting rules; dialogue rhythm for ten-second clips.

Part IX — Planning (15 pp.)

Episode list with themes and comedy engines; the day counter; scene register; continuity checklist; a template for planning a new episode.

Part X — Production library (80 pp.)

1–5	Home life: morning, room tour, tea, workshop, cooking	27
6–10	Out in Dhuan Tola: signal, bench, maze, interview, bargaining	24
11–15	Public places: bridge, night vlog, Window No. 7, water point, Shitadhya plan	24
16–20	Source-inspired trips and reviews: Saumya, Vaitarani viewpoint, accommodation review, serious advice, bed hacks	24

21–25	Payoffs: crow story, fitness, oil crisis, a guest returns, Day 30 special	22

Part XI — Workflow and references (20 pp.)

Workflow from script to edit (4) · consistency techniques (3) · troubleshooting table (4) · voice-over and subtitles in the edit (2) · bibliography and source log (4) · index of scenes, places and characters (3).

Batch plan

The book is produced in numbered batches. Each batch is checked by `tools/scenes.py` and built by `tools/build.py`, which reports the verified page count.

Batch	Contents	Status
1	Master TOC; research and source plan; character bible; world and continuity guide; episode list; Episodes 1–3	This volume
2	Part II in full (research guide); Episodes 4–6	Planned
3	Parts IV and V (residential life; food, rooms, routines); Episodes 7–10	Planned
4	Parts VI and VII (streets and markets; mythological locations); Episodes 11–15	Planned
5	Parts VIII and IX (comedy; planning); Episodes 16–20	Planned
6	Episodes 21–25; Part XI; index; final assembly, layout to 300 pages and page-count verification	Planned

Master files kept up to date in every batch: this table of contents, the scene register (generated, see the appendix), the character bible (Chapter 3), the continuity ledger (Chapter 4) and the source log (Chapter 2).

2 · Research and Source Plan

How the factual side of the book is researched, checked and cited — plus the facts verified for Batch 1.

Research rules used in this book

1. Read the passage before using the claim. Nothing enters the factual guide from memory or from a secondary summary alone.
2. Record the location precisely: source, chapter, verse (śloka) range where the edition gives one, and the page of the PDF where the edition is a PDF.
3. Compare editions. Chapter numbers and figures differ between editions; differences are logged, not smoothed over.
4. Summarise in original words. Modern translations are copyrighted. The book paraphrases and quotes only short phrases.
5. Never invent a quotation, verse number or reference. If a detail cannot be checked it is labelled UNVERIFIED or left out.
6. Keep a source log (below) and carry it forward in every batch.

Source log (status on 26 October 2026)

S3	Garuḍa Mahā Purāṇa — Preta Khaṇḍa (English, As-is Translation), Vedic People — ch. 47 "On Sins and Vaitarani": https://vedicpeople.com/puranas/maha-puranas/garuda-purana/preta-khanda/read/as-is-translation/chapter-047/	Verse-numbered online English translation; no individual translator named on the page	Read. Also read ch. 2 "Results of actions" and ch. 3 "Description of Hell" (same URL pattern, `chapter-002/`, `chapter-003/`).	Vaitarani; Yama's messengers; the cold hell Atiśīta; time in naraka.

How S4 is cited: chapter title, the śloka range S4 gives, and the page of the downloaded PDF file, e.g. (S4, ch. 2 "Yama's Abode", śloka 2–32, PDF p. 9). PDF pages are used because each PDF page carries two printed page numbers.

How S3 is cited: chapter and verse, e.g. (S3, ch. 47, v. 3). Where S3 gives information only in its editorial chapter summary, that is said explicitly, because a summary is not verse text.

Sources to consult in Batch 2

- S1/S2 through another network or a printed copy, to confirm translator, year and the chapter numbering of "The Way of Yama."
- A Hindi edition of the Garuḍa Purāṇa Sāroddhāra (the abridgement that S4 broadly follows), to check names of the sixteen cities in Devanagari.
- A scholarly complete translation, such as the multi-volume Motilal Banarsidass Garuḍa Purāṇa in the Ancient Indian Tradition and Mythology series UNVERIFIED (to be confirmed before citing).

Until those checks are done, only S3 and S4 are cited as evidence.

Verified facts for the series (Batch 1)

Each fact below was checked in the passage cited. These are the facts that scenes may use.

The road to Yama

- SOURCE-BASED Excluding the Vaitarani, the way to Yama's domain measures eighty-six thousand yojanas, and the soul in its new body covers 247 yojanas in a day and night (S4, ch. 1, closing section, ślokas 47–60, PDF p. 8). S4 glosses a yojana as roughly eight miles.
- SOURCE-BASED The road passes through sixteen cities: Saumya, Sauripura, Nagendra Bhavana, Gandharva, Shailagama, Krauncha, Kroora, Vichitra Bhavana, Bahwapada, Duhkhada, Nanakrandana, Sutapta, Raudra, Payovarsha, Sheetadhya and Bahubheeti (S4, PDF p. 8; spellings as in S4).
- SOURCE-BASED The path is described as dark and rough, with no shade, no food and no water, heat like "ten suns," or else freezing wind; thorns; a forest of sword-like leaves; pits, hot sand, smoke and showers of coals and stones (S4, ch. 2 "Yama's Abode", ślokas 2–32, PDF p. 9).
- SOURCE-BASED Yama's messengers are described as fierce and foul-smelling, carrying clubs and sticks (S3, ch. 2, vv. 50–52).
- SOURCE-BASED Saumya, the first city, is described as beautiful; there is a fig tree and the river Pushpabhadra, and the travellers rest a little (S4, ch. 2, ślokas 42–47, PDF p. 11).
- SOURCE-BASED The kinkaras ask the soul what provisions it carries, on a road where "nothing would be sold and nothing could be bought" (S4, ch. 2, ślokas 48–49, PDF p. 11). This line is the reason the series never puts a shop on the sacred road itself: every stall in the show is in the invented neighbourhood.
- SOURCE-BASED Sheetadhya is named for extreme cold, said to be a hundred times harder to bear than Himalayan cold (S4, ch. 2, ślokas 70–81, PDF p. 12).

The Vaitarani

- SOURCE-BASED The Vaitarani is described as a mighty river at the threshold of Yama's city, a hundred yojanas wide, impassable and foul-smelling (S3, ch. 47, vv. 2–3). S4 says it "runs for a hundred yojanas" (S4, ch. 2, PDF p. 9).
- SOURCE-BASED Those who made gifts during life cross it easily; others sink (S3, ch. 47, v. 8).
- SOURCE-BASED At the city of Vichitra (Chitrabhavana), ruled by King Vichitra (described as Yama's brother), fishermen offer to ferry the soul across if it has merit. They explain the name: the river can be crossed only by vitaraṇa, giving (S4, ch. 2, ślokas 57–69, PDF p. 12).
- SOURCE-BASED The rite of giving a cow (the Vaitarani gift) is described with its offerings, and is said to ease the crossing (S3, ch. 47, vv. 25–38; S4, ch. 8, ślokas 77–90, PDF p. 33).

Yama's city and court

- SOURCE-BASED Yama's city has four gates; the virtuous enter by the east, west and north, and sinners by the south (S4, ch. 4, ślokas 1–3, PDF p. 17; also ch. 3, PDF p. 13).
- SOURCE-BASED At the gate stands Dharmadhvaja, who reports to Chitragupta; the Śravaṇas and their wives, the Śravaṇīs, report deeds truthfully (S4, ch. 3, ślokas 3–24, PDF p. 14).

- SOURCE-BASED The city of Yama is described as splendid: four-cornered, with four gateways and high ramparts, hundreds of decorated streets, gardens and a pleasant climate for the meritorious who live there; Chitragupta keeps the record of all deeds (S4, ch. 14 "The Court of the Deity of Death", ślokas 1–30, PDF pp. 50–51).

Narakas and time

- SOURCE-BASED S4 lists twenty-one principal narakas, including Tamisra, Raurava, Andha Tamisra and Kumbhipaka (S4, ch. 3, ślokas 60–64, PDF p. 16).
- SOURCE-BASED S3 names a very cold hell, Atiśīta (S3, ch. 3, v. 17), and says a day in hell equals one hundred mortal years (S3, ch. 3, v. 79).

Where the sources differ

Topic	S4 says	S3 says	How the book handles it
Length of the road	86,000 yojanas, excluding the Vaitarani (PDF p. 8)	Ch. 2's editorial summary gives 46,000 yojanas; no verse in ch. 2 states a figure	The book cites S4's figure and notes the difference. It never states one figure as "the" answer.
Vaitarani size	"Runs for a hundred yojanas"	"A hundred yojanas wide" (ch. 47, v. 3)	Both say a hundred yojanas; the book says "a hundred yojanas" without choosing length or width.
Where the Vaitarani is	Met on the road, at the city of Vichitra, where fishermen offer to ferry the worthy	"At the threshold of Yama's city"	Treated as consistent in spirit; scenes stay at a distant viewpoint and avoid specifying geography.
The cold place	Sheetadhya, the fifteenth city on the road	Atiśīta, a hell	These are different things in different contexts. The series uses Sheetadhya (a city) for its cold-trip episode and never merges the two.
Ch. 2 speaker	Vishnu (Sri Hari) to Garuda	Verse text presents the speaker as Krishna	Not relevant to scenes; noted for Batch 2.

What the sources do not describe

INTERPRETATION The texts describe a road, a river, cities passed through, Yama's city and court, and places of consequence. They do not describe a daily residential life: no kitchens, tea, toilets, markets, rooms, repair shops, queues for water or office windows for ordinary residents. That gap is deliberate territory for the series. Everything Saapwaa does at home and in his neighbourhood is labelled FICTIONAL COMEDY.

Respect rules drawn from the research

1. Never show torment, punishment or suffering as a gag. The sources describe them; the series does not stage them.

2. Never caricature Yama, Chitragupta, Dharmadhvaja, the Śravaṇas, deities, Brahmins, cows or rituals. When they are mentioned, they are mentioned with the sources' own dignity.
3. The giving theme of the Vaitarani is the one moral idea the series returns to, and it is always played gently and against Saapwaa himself (he is stingy with snacks).
4. No scene claims a fictional rule is scriptural. When a fictional resident states a "rule", the scene status says FICTIONAL COMEDY.

Trend research note

Batch 1 uses only broad, widely shared short-video formats — the morning routine, the room tour, the food or stall review, the awkward street interview and the "plan goes wrong" clip. No specific creator's video, dialogue or concept was used, so no creator URLs are recorded yet. When a later batch draws on a specific public example, its URL will be logged here and the scene will be rebuilt around Saapwaa's own situation.

3 · Saapwaa — The Definitive Character Bible

Everything about Saapwaa that must never drift between clips. All of it is FICTIONAL COMEDY.

The locked design

Feature	Locked value	Common drift to reject
Species and style	Cute, expressive cartoon snake; cinematic 3D cartoon render	Realistic snake; 2D flat style; cobra hood
Body	Leaf-green, with darker green spots	Yellow-green, teal, stripes instead of spots
Belly and snout	Cream-yellow	White belly; green snout
Eyes	Large, expressive brown eyes with white sclera	Slit pupils; yellow or red eyes; black button eyes
Mouth	Small visible fangs; wide, flexible smile	Big venom fangs; forked tongue in every shot
Scarf	Red-and-white striped scarf, knotted at the neck, one tail end hanging	Solid red; plaid; missing
Backpack	Brown backpack worn on the upper back behind the head	Missing; different colour
Eyewear	None. Sunglasses only if a scene explicitly needs them	Default sunglasses
Size	About two metres long; when he rears up, his head reaches an adult's chest	Pocket-sized or giant
Phone	Small black phone on a short bamboo selfie stick, gripped by the curled tip of his tail	Phone held in a "hand"; floating phone

Prompt lock — copy into every prompt

Short lock (video prompts): `Saapwaa, a cute cartoon snake: leaf-green body with darker green spots, cream-yellow belly and snout, big brown eyes with white sclera, small fangs, red-and-white striped scarf, brown backpack, no sunglasses.`

Long lock (image prompts): the short lock, plus: `expressive eyebrows, smooth glossy skin, about two metres long, holding a small phone on a short bamboo selfie stick with the curled tip of his tail.`

The checker in `tools/scenes.py` refuses to build a scene whose image or video prompt is missing any of the six core lock phrases.

Movement

- Slithers in smooth S-curves; never walks, never has hands.
- Rears the front third of his body to talk to people, like standing up.
- Uses the tail tip as a hand: phone stick, lifting a lid, pointing, scratching his chin.
- The head does the acting: tilts, slow blinks, eyebrow lifts, sideways looks to camera.
- Moves a little slower when it is hot. He complains about this.

Personality

Friendly, confident, mischievous, curious and sarcastic. He likes being on camera and believes he is a professional. Circumstances keep undermining that belief, and his best moments come from the gap between how he presents himself and what actually happens.

- Vain but likeable. Fixes his scarf before important shots.
- Curious. Cannot pass an odd object without inspecting it.
- Stingy with snacks. A small, recurring flaw that pays off in the Vaitarani episode, where the sources' theme of giving turns gently against him.
- Never cruel. He roasts situations, systems and himself. When he teases a resident, the resident usually wins the exchange.
- Never explains why he is in Narak. If asked: "वो लंबी कहानी है।" This is a running mystery, never resolved, never theological.

Voice

A young Indian vlogger speaking casual Hindi with natural English words. Short sentences. He talks to the viewer, not at them.

Use	Sparingly	Never
भाई, अरे यार, देखो, सच बताऊँ, सीरियसली	गाइज (at most once per clip), वेट गाइज (once per episode)	Formal narration ("प्रिय दर्शकों..."), preaching, news-anchor tone, long greetings

Voice-over direction for TTS or a voice actor: young adult male, warm and playful, medium pace, slightly nasal comic edge, quick deadpan drops after punchlines.

Signature lines (each limited to the episodes listed in the running-joke ledger):

- "डे काउंटर अपडेट" — the daily count of days in Narak.
- "रिव्यू टाइम" — before rating anything.
- "ये नॉर्मल नहीं है... पर यहाँ नॉर्मल है।" — maximum twice in the whole series.

Camera grammar

Mode	When	How to write it in a prompt
Selfie walk	Default talking shots	"handheld selfie view from the phone on his tail-held stick, slight walking bob"
Selfie still	Confessions, reactions	"static selfie close-up, phone held at arm's length by his tail"
Rear camera (POV)	Showing a place or person	"first-person view from his phone, the tip of his snout at the frame edge"
Propped phone	Physical comedy that needs his whole body	"phone propped on a rock, wide static shot"

Never write drone shots, orbiting shots or crane moves while Saapwaa is filming himself.

Belongings (props that must stay consistent)

Prop	Look	Where it lives
Phone and stick	Small black phone, short pale bamboo stick	Always with him
Backpack	Brown, two buckles, slightly scuffed	On his back
Day diary	Small cloth-bound notebook, no visible writing on screen	Backpack
Steel tiffin	Three-tier steel tiffin box	Backpack or kitchen shelf
Wet cotton cloth	Faded blue, used to cool the stone bed	Cave No. 13
Clay water pot (matka)	Round, terracotta, always warm	Cave No. 13 kitchen

Recurring residents

All residents are FICTIONAL COMEDY. They are ordinary people of an invented neighbourhood, drawn as gentle cartoon adults. None of them represents a figure from the sources.

Kulhad Didi — runs the Garam Adda tea stall

Kulhad Didi: a middle-aged cartoon woman with a round face and kind, tired eyes, mustard-yellow cotton saree with a maroon border, soot-smudged white apron, hair in a bun, holding a big dented copper kettle.

Calm, unbothered, sells "ठंडी चाय" that has never once been cold. Deadpan; always wins the exchange.

Tapu Chacha — next-door neighbour in Cave No. 12

Tapu Chacha: an elderly thin cartoon man, bald with white side tufts and white stubble, sleepy half-closed eyes, faded maroon kurta and white dhoti, always holding a small brass lota.

Kind, slow and permanently postponing. His answer to everything is "कल से पक्का।"

Lalten Lal — lamp and torch repairman

Lalten Lal: a lanky young cartoon man with soot-smudged cheeks, big round brass goggles pushed up on his forehead, olive-green vest over a rolled-sleeve shirt, small tools in a waist pouch.

An inventor who over-engineers everything and explains his inventions with huge seriousness.

Kallu — the crow

Kallu: a glossy black cartoon crow with one bent tail feather and a thin red thread tied on one ankle, clever bright eyes.

Does not speak. Steals Saapwaa's snacks. Crows appear in the source descriptions of the road (S4, ch. 2, PDF p. 9); Kallu himself is invented and only ever plays a cheeky neighbourhood bird.

Munshi Ratiram — clerk at Window No. 7

Munshi Ratiram: a plump cartoon clerk with round wire spectacles, ink-stained fingers, cream kurta, a reed pen behind his ear, sitting behind a small arched stone window.

Runs an invented neighbourhood office for lamp-oil rations and room repairs. He is not Chitragupta and is never placed in Yama's court. Polite, literal-minded, buried in palm-leaf bundles.

Nanu — the old guide at the river viewpoint

Nanu: an elderly cartoon man with a neat white beard, calm wise smile, faded indigo cotton kurta, leaning on a smooth wooden oar used as a walking staff.

A retired boatman of the neighbourhood who takes visitors to a distant viewpoint over the Vaitarani and explains what the texts say, accurately and without drama. His information is drawn from the cited sources; he himself is `FICTIONAL COMEDY`.

Drift checklist for every generated image

1. Spots present and darker green? 2. Belly and snout cream-yellow? 3. Brown eyes with white sclera? 4. Scarf red-and-white striped? 5. Backpack brown and visible? 6. No sunglasses? 7. Phone on a bamboo stick in the tail, not floating?

If two or more fail, regenerate rather than fixing it in the edit.

4 · The Narak World and Continuity Guide

Where Saapwaa lives, what is real in the sources and what is invented, and the ledger that keeps 25 episodes consistent.

The premise

FICTIONAL COMEDY Saapwaa lives in Dhuan Tola ("Smoke Quarter"), an invented settlement of cave homes beside the road the sources describe — the way a village sits beside a highway. Residents here live ordinary, inconvenient lives: they fetch water, refill lamps, drink tea, borrow things and forget to return them. Nobody is tormented here; the series never shows torment.

INTERPRETATION The sources describe the road to Yama and its sixteen cities as stations on a journey, not as neighbourhoods with daily life (Chapter 2). Treating a settlement as existing beside that road is the series' own invention and is always labelled as such.

Why is Saapwaa here? Never explained. "वो लंबी कहानी है।"

The look of Dhuan Tola

> Environment lock (paste into prompts set in the neighbourhood): `Dhuan Tola, a rocky cave neighbourhood in Narak: basalt-grey and rust-red rock, warm oil-lamp and torch light, smoky maroon sky with no sun, faint drifting embers.`

- Light: warm amber from clay oil lamps and wall torches. Fire is small and controlled; no infernos.
- Sky: a low, smoky maroon ceiling. No sun, moon or stars.
- Rock: grey basalt with rust-red streaks, smoothed by use; steps cut into slopes.
- People: ordinary cartoon adults in faded cotton clothes, calm and a bit tired. No wounds, chains or gore.
- Sound bed for the edit: distant wind, crackling lamps, a tea kettle, occasional crow calls.

Locations

#	Location	Label	Look and use
L1	Cave No. 13 — Saapwaa's home	FICTIONAL COMEDY	One main room cut into rock: hot stone bed; wall niche with a clay oil lamp; wall torch by the arched entrance.
L1a	Kitchen corner	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Three-stone stove, terracotta water pot (always warm), small shelf with steel tiffin. Food cooks from the ambient heat.

#	Location	Label	Look and use
L1b	Bathing corner	FICTIONAL COMEDY	A stone basin under a thin warm trickle from a crack in the rock; a copper mug.
L1c	Toilet nook	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Behind a jute curtain. Never shown beyond the curtain.
L2	Dhuan Tola lanes	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Narrow stone lanes, cave doors with lamps, steps, washing lines.
L3	Garam Adda tea stall	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Kulhad Didi's stall: stone counter, copper kettle, stacks of clay cups (kulhads).
L4	Lalten Lal's workshop	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Cluttered with lamps, wicks, pulleys and odd inventions.
L5	Signal Rock	FICTIONAL COMEDY	One tall rock where Saapwaa's phone sometimes gets one bar.
L6	The Rest Bench	FICTIONAL COMEDY	A carved stone bench under an overhang, the only shade nearby. Nobody leaves it.
L7	The Pagdandi maze	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Identical branching stone paths; residents give directions by rocks ("the angry-looking one").
L8	The Haat	FICTIONAL COMEDY	Small weekly market of mats and baskets; trade in cowrie shells.
L9	Bridge No. 3	FICTIONAL COMEDY	A rope-and-plank bridge over a dry ravine. Not the Vaitarani.
L10	Window No. 7	FICTIONAL COMEDY	A neighbourhood office window for lamp-oil rations and room repairs, run by Munshi Ratiram. Not connected to Yama's court.
L11	The water point	FICTIONAL COMEDY	A stone spout with a queue and a long-handled ladle.
L12	River viewpoint	SOURCE-BASED - inspired	A ridge far above a dark, hazy river identified as the Vaitarani. The river is never shown up close and never with people in it. Facts come from S3 ch. 47 and S4 ch. 2.
L13	Saumya	SOURCE-BASED - inspired	The first city of the road, described as beautiful, with a fig tree and the Pushpabhadra river (S4, PDF p. 11). Used for one gentle day-trip episode.
L14	The approach to Sheetadhya	SOURCE-BASED - inspired	The city named for extreme cold (S4, PDF p. 12). Saapwaa reaches only the frosty outskirts.

Places that are never staged

Yama's court, Chitragupta's hall, the southern gate as a place of judgement, any naraka named in the sources, the silk-cotton tree, and anyone being punished. They may be mentioned by a guide with a citation; they are not shown.

Fictional rules of daily life

All FICTIONAL COMEDY. These give episodes something to push against.

1. Lamps first. Every home refills its lamp at the start of the "day", signalled by Lalten Lal ringing a brass bell.
2. All water is warm. "Cold" means "not boiling."
3. Borrowing is normal; returning is a virtue. Most people manage the first part.
4. Cowrie shells (कौड़ी) are money. Tea costs two.
5. The Rest Bench has no time limit. That is the problem.
6. Shade is shared. You may join anyone's shadow if you ask first.

Timeline

Saapwaa has lived in Dhuan Tola for five days before Episode 1. Each episode covers about one day, so Episode n takes place on Day n + 5.

Days	Episodes	What has happened by then
1–5	— (off screen)	Moved into Cave No. 13. Lent his copper bucket to Tapu Chacha on Day 3. Learned the lamp bell.
6	1	Morning routine; Kallu steals breakfast; the bucket is still not back.
7	2	Room tour; the wet-cloth hack fails.
8	3	First visit to Garam Adda; the "cold tea" truth.
9–30	4–25	See the episode list (Chapter 5).

SOURCE-BASED -inspired running gag: S3 (ch. 3, v. 79) says a day in naraka equals one hundred mortal years. Saapwaa does this sum about his followers on Earth in Episode 6. The joke is about time and his ego; it makes no claim about his own judgement or fate.

Running-joke ledger

Joke	Introduced	Callbacks planned	Payoff	Status after Batch 1
The stone bed is a griddle (तवा)	E1-S1	E2, E5, E12	E20 bed hacks	Running
Kallu steals snacks	E1-S5	E3 (lurking), E7, E14	E21	Running
Tapu Chacha's "कल से पक्का" and the bucket	E1-S6	E2-S6, E9	E25: the bucket returns	Running
"Cold" tea is never cold	E3	E9, E18	E15: in Sheetadhya the tea finally goes cold — and he hates it	Running
Food cooks itself from the heat	E2-S4	E5	E5	Set up
Saapwaa is stingy with snacks	E1-S5	E3, E7	E17 (Vaitarani giving theme), E23 (he shares lamp oil)	Set up
"वो लंबी कहानी है"	E9	Any	Never resolved	Planned

Joke	Introduced	Callbacks planned	Payoff	Status after Batch 1
Day counter ("डे काउंटर अपडेट")	E1-S1	E6, E15, E25	E25 Day 30	Running

Continuity props by episode

Episode	Must be visible	Must not appear
1	Hot bed, oil lamp, warm pot, leaf plate with paratha, Tapu Chacha holding the copper bucket	Sunglasses; open toilet nook
2	Wet blue cloth, kitchen corner, jute curtain	Fire under the cooking pot
3	Copper kettle, clay cups, cowrie shells, Kallu on the roof (final scene)	Price boards or any written signs

Unresolved threads after Batch 1

1. The copper bucket is still with Tapu Chacha.
2. Kallu has eyed Saapwaa's biscuit at Garam Adda (picked up at the start of Episode 4).
3. The bed is still too hot; the wet-cloth hack failed.
4. Whose crow is Kallu? The red thread on his ankle suggests someone in Dhuan Tola knows.

5 · The Episode List

Twenty-five episodes, each built on a different comedy engine so the series never leans on one kind of joke. Each episode is a 40–60 second short made of five or six 10-second scenes.

Comedy engines used in the series

Code	Engine	What drives the laugh
CR	Confident routine undermined	Saapwaa presents a polished routine; the world refuses to cooperate.
PP	Professional presentation	He acts like a real-estate agent, chef or reviewer; the facts embarrass him.
VA	Vendor's unexpected answer	A resident's calm logic beats his question.
OI	Over-engineered invention	A serious inventor solves a tiny problem in a huge way.
PG	Plan goes wrong	A clear goal, an escalating series of setbacks.
AI	Awkward interview	He wants content; the resident gives unusable, perfect answers.
SL	Social-rule discovery	A harmless local custom he did not know about.
BG	Bargaining	A negotiation where the stakes are absurdly small.
SD	Sensory deprivation	Comedy in darkness or silence; reactions carry the scene.
GT	Gentle trip	Wonder first, small jokes second (used for source-inspired places).
CB	Callback payoff	A running joke finally lands.

Why the list looks like this

- Variety of engines. No engine runs in two consecutive episodes except where a payoff needs it (Episodes 20–21).
- Queues, offices and heat are rationed. Office humour appears once (Ep 13), queue humour once (Ep 14), and heat is the main engine only in Episodes 1, 5 and 20.

- Source-inspired episodes are spaced out (6, 15, 16, 17) and are written in a gentler, "wonder first" register.
- Payoffs are back-loaded so that Episodes 20–25 reward viewers who have followed along.

Episode synopses for this batch

Episode 1 — Good Morning, Narak (Day 6). Saapwaa runs his now-familiar morning: waking on the griddle-hot bed, drinking "cold" water that is nearly tea, refilling the lamp, testing the bath trickle, losing breakfast to Kallu, and asking Tapu Chacha — again — for his bucket.

Episode 2 — Cave No. 13 Room Tour (Day 7). He gives a polished estate-agent tour of his cave. The ceiling drops a pebble, the bed burns his tail, the wet-cloth hack turns into a papad, the kitchen cooks without fire, and the bathroom tour is cancelled on dignity grounds.

Episode 3 — The Truth About Cold Tea (Day 8). Rumour says Garam Adda sells cold tea. Kulhad Didi explains the local definition of cold, sets a price, and Saapwaa reviews a cup of tea that tries to melt his face. Kallu is watching his biscuit.

6 · Production Batch 1 — Episodes 1 to 3

Seventeen ten-second scenes. Every video prompt is standalone and under 900 characters; the exact count is printed on each prompt box. In every DIALOGUE block, the words are copied verbatim into the video prompt.

Using these scenes. Generate the image first and check it against the drift checklist (Chapter 3). Then generate the video, using the image as the starting frame if your tool allows it. If a clip fails twice, generate it silently with the same prompt minus the dialogue sentence, and add the line as voice-over in the edit.

Day 6 · Engine: confident routine undermined · Cave No. 13 and the lane outside · 6 scenes

EPISODE 1 — SCENE 1

Scene title: The Griddle Bed

Story purpose: Open the series on its signature everyday problem: Saapwaa's bed is as hot as a griddle.

Continuity: Day 6, morning, inside Cave No. 13. Saapwaa slept coiled on the stone bed with his backpack on. His phone is propped on a wall shelf and recording.

green body with darker green spots, cream-yellow belly and snout, big brown eyes with white sclera, small fangs, red-and-white striped scarf, brown backpack, no sunglasses. Expressive eyebrows, smooth glossy skin, about two metres long. He springs upright from a tight coil on a flat grey stone bed, eyes wide open in shock, as faint heat shimmer rises from the stone. Small rock-cut cave room with basalt-grey and rust-red walls; a clay oil lamp glows in a wall niche, warm amber light, soft shadows. Wide static shot from bed height, as if from a phone propped on a shelf. Foreground: edge of the stone bed; background: arched cave doorway with a dim smoky maroon glow. No visible text, subtitles, logos or watermarks.

stone bed with faint heat shimmer. Static wide shot from a phone propped on a shelf. He opens his eyes, jolts upright as if the stone burned him, then leans toward the camera, sleepy and annoyed. He says in Hindi: "गुड मॉर्निंग गाइज, डे सिक्स। ये बिस्तर नहीं, तवा है। मैं रोज़ यहाँ हल्का-सा पराठा बनकर उठता हूँ।" No text, subtitles, logos or

> सापवा: मैं रोज़ यहाँ हल्का-सा पराठा बनकर उठता हूँ।

VISUAL COMEDY: His whole body springs straight up like a coil off a hot pan, the backpack bouncing a beat later; then a flat, unimpressed stare into the lens.

ENDING / NEXT-SCENE LINK: He slides off the bed and fans the stone with his tail, then heads for the kitchen corner. Scene 2 opens at the water pot.

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY. The cave home and hot bed are inventions of the series; no source describes them.

EPISODE 1 — SCENE 2

Scene title: Morning Water

Story purpose: Establish the rule that all water in Dhuan Tola is warm, and set up the tea episode.

Continuity: A minute later, kitchen corner of Cave No. 13. He now holds the phone on its bamboo stick with his tail.

tail. He sips from a small steel cup on a stone shelf while thick steam rises from it; his eyes are half-closed in a flat, betrayed expression. Behind him: a round terracotta water pot, three blackened stones of a stove, a wooden shelf with a steel tiffin. Warm amber oil-lamp light, basalt-grey rock wall. No visible bamboo stick with his tail. He bends down, sips from the steaming cup, pauses, and slowly looks at the camera as steam drifts across the lens. He says in Hindi:

"सुबह का पहला गिलास, ठंडा-ठंडा पानी… भाई, ये पानी नहीं, चाय का पहला स्टेप है।" No text, subtitles,

DIALOGUE:

> सापवा: सुबह का पहला गिलास, ठंडा-ठंडा पानी…
> सापवा: भाई, ये पानी नहीं, चाय का पहला स्टेप है।

VISUAL COMEDY: A thick curl of steam rises out of the “cold” water and briefly fogs the lens; he blinks through it without changing expression.

ENDING / NEXT-SCENE LINK: He wipes the lens on the end of his scarf. Outside, a brass bell rings (sound only), and he turns toward the wall lamp.

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY. The warm-water rule is a series invention. (The sources describe the road to Yama as having no water, S4 ch. 2, PDF p. 9; Dhuan Tola is an invented place beside it.)

EPISODE 1 — SCENE 3

DIALOGUE:

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY. The lamp bell and lamp-first rule are invented customs of Dhuan Tola.

EPISODE 1 — SCENE 4

Scene title: The Tail Test

ENDING / NEXT-SCENE LINK: Bath abandoned. He grabs the phone and heads for the door with breakfast.

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY.

EPISODE 1 — SCENE 5

Scene title: Breakfast Tax

Story purpose: Introduce Kallu the crow and Saapwaa's stinginess, two threads that pay off later.

Continuity: Ready for the day, he slithers toward the cave doorway with a paratha on a leaf plate balanced on top of his head. The phone is back on the stick in his tail.

DIALOGUE:

VISUAL COMEDY: The empty leaf plate stays perfectly balanced on his head after the theft; only his eyes move, following the crow out of frame.

ENDING / NEXT-SCENE LINK: He lets the leaf plate slide off and steps outside into the lane, where his neighbour is sitting.

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY. Crows are among the birds named on the road in S4 (ch. 2, PDF p. 9), but Kallu is an invented, harmless neighbourhood crow.

EPISODE 1 — SCENE 6

Scene title: The Bucket Situation

Story purpose: Introduce Tapu Chacha and the longest-running joke of the series.

Vertical 9:16, cinematic 3D cartoon. Saapwaa, a cute cartoon snake: leaf-green body with darker green spots, cream-yellow belly and snout, big brown eyes with white sclera, small fangs, red-and-white striped scarf, brown backpack, no sunglasses. He stands at an arched rock cave doorway with a burning wall torch, smoky maroon sky. Static selfie shot, phone on a bamboo stick in his tail. He presents the doorway like an estate agent with a big smile; a small pebble falls from the arch and bonks his head with a puff of dust; he keeps smiling as one eye twitches. He says in Hindi: "वेलकम टू गुफा नंबर तेरह। नेचुरल स्टोन, नेचुरल लाइटिंग… और नेचुरल छत गिरना भी फ्री है।" No text, subtitles, logos or watermarks.

> सापवा: वेलकम टू गुफा नंबर तेरह। नेचुरल स्टोन, नेचुरल लाइटिंग…
> सापवा: और नेचुरल छत गिरना भी फ्री है।

VISUAL COMEDY: The professional smile never drops; only one eye twitches after the pebble lands.

ENDING / NEXT-SCENE LINK: He glances up at the arch suspiciously and slithers inside quickly. Scene 2 is inside, at the bed.

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY.

EPISODE 2 — SCENE 2

Scene title: The Master Bedroom

Story purpose: Call back to the griddle bed with a new, visual proof of its heat.

Continuity: Inside Cave No. 13. The phone is propped on the shelf so he can use his tail. A ball of flattened roti dough is ready on a leaf.

VISUAL COMEDY: The roti puffs up perfectly on the bed — the best cooking he will ever do, achieved by accident in his bedroom.

ENDING / NEXT-SCENE LINK: He eats the roti in one bite and pulls out a wet blue cloth: he has a plan.

SOURCE STATUS: Entirely fictional FICTIONAL COMEDY.

EPISODE 2 — SCENE 3

Scene title: The Wet-Cloth Jugaad

Story purpose: A plan that fails instantly, keeping the bed thread alive for later episodes.
